Sir John's Condition

The Premier still lives, and while at times his condition gives his friends some slight hopes of his recovery, the most sanguine feel that the great statesman is fast nearing the end of a wonderfully successful public career. The greatest excitement prevails throughout the Dominion, and eager enquiries come from the leading men of the world concerning the veteran chieftain's condition. Her Majesty sends messages of sympathy daily to Earnscliffe.

The loss his death will be to the country cannot be estimated, and the party he has successfully led for so many years will keenly feel the want of his matured wisdom and great ability. From bulletins just received we cannot reasonably ex pect that he will live many days.

There is considerable speculation s to who will succeed Sir John out the choice will probably fall on either Sir John Thompson, Sir Charles Tupper, or Hon. J. C. Abbott. Either of these gentlemen are well qualified to successfully lead the Party, and we feel satisfied that the country is safe in the hands of either. Sir John Thompson is a man of good abilities, has the confidence of the Party, and, being in the Commons, will most likely be called upon to take the place of the greatest man Canada ever knew. Ottawa, June 1.—9 a.m. Hon

OTTAWA, June 1.—9 a.m. Hon. Mr. Dewdney was at Earnsciffe all night. He was with the Premier for a large part of the time. Sir John recognized him, but made no effort to speak. As yet there is no sign of a return of the faculty of speech. The sufferer lies in a sort of semi-coma and has to be aroused when it is desired to speak to him. Occasionally he has to be turned in the bed. On such occasions the Premier shows a disinclination to be Premier shows a disinclination to be less trouble with our pre-emptions.

ENGLAND AND THE STATES A Washington special says that the indications are that an amicable

Apropos of the subject of wills the late Mr. Barnum has left an example which all men who have property to bequeath would do well to follow. It is stated that several years ago, after making his will, he called in a number of physicians and caused himself to be examined as to his mental condition, the physicians attesting that he was entirely sane. The result is that his was which have occupied the time of the court without an much as the suggestion of a contest. Down came a ferce Grammar

And rapped on the floor,

And of spellers and lexicone

Up leaped a score.

Then an Atlas demanded
What meant such a row,
And a French Reader answered,
First making a bow,
It is time we should know
What the young people think
Their school-books are for,
When they blot us with ink,

"And tear out our titles, And loosen our leaves, Or pile us in heapes like Disorderly sheaves. We are worth better treate The Reader averred, "And I," he said, firmly, "Resolve to be heard."

Then eight ranks of figures

A History next
Areae, solemn and grand,
With the air of a conqueror
Viewing the land.
I confess, and the tome,
To a certain contempt;
From troubles like yours
I am always exempt.

"If you interest the young,"
The hig volume went on,
"They will haste to your tasks,
And obligingly con
Whatever you wish;
But a history, no doubt,
Is different from figures.
That puts a child out."

What might have been done Had not morning appeared

Had not morning so I caunot conceive Of the strange and the weird. When nine o'clock came, With the children themselves, The books were all safe In their nooks on the shelves.
